Boston has been in the running for Amazon's second headquarters, and a new study says we've got a pretty good chance at becoming the tech giant's second home. But a separate poll shows that Bostonians aren't super supportive of having HQ2 here, especially compared to residents in other finalist cities. Metro spoke with an urban planning expert to hear about why some Boston residents may feel "meh" about HQ2, and what needs to be done to quell those concerns. WHITE HOUSE WANTS TO ROLL BACK SPENDING DEAL

1 Congress needs to consider rolling back the spending deal that Republicans brokered with Democrats last month, because lawmakers voted to enact the $1.3 trillion legislation without reading it, an aide to President Donald Trump said on Sunday.White House legislative director Marc Short said the spending bill, which ran to more than 2,000 pages, was rushed into place to avoid a government shutdown. He urged Senate Republican leader Mitch McConnell to consider new "rescissions" legislation with spending cuts sought by fiscal conservatives in the House of Representatives. "Nobody saw the text of the bill within 24 hours, because the process in Congress is broken," Short told NBC's "Meet the Press." "We would ask the Senate to have patience and look at the package that gets sent up," Short said. Some Republicans want a recissions bill that would cut up to $60 billion in nonmilitary spending, funds that were crucial to winning Democratic support. Reopening the bipartisan deal could divide Republicans during a midterm election year in which they are vulnerable to a Democratic surge. The party is already struggling against turbulence over House Speaker Paul Ryan's decision to retire.

TRUMP SAYS 'LONG WAY' TO GO ON NORTH KOREA

2 President Donald Trump said the North Korean nuclear crisis is a long way from being resolved on Sunday, striking a cautious note a day after the North's pledge to end its nuclear tests raised hopes before planned summits with South Korea and the United States. "We are a long way from conclusion on North Korea, maybe things will work out, and maybe they won't — only time will tell," Trump said on Twitter. North Korea said on Saturday it was suspending nuclear and missile tests and scrapping its nuclear test site, and instead pursuing economic growth and peace. Some leaders expressed doubts about Kim's intentions and South Korean President Moon Jae-in will be under intense international scrutiny when he meets him on Friday at the first North Korea-South Korea summit in more than a decade. In a tweet minutes before he tempered enthusiasm about the North's statement, Trump interpreted it as a pledge to denuclearize: "Wow, we haven't given up anything & they have agreed to denuclearization (so great for World), site closure, & no more testing!" However, Kim's announcement did not include a commitment to scrap existing nuclear weapons and missiles.

POLICE SEEK GUNMAN WHO KILLED FOUR AT WAFFLE HOUSE

3 A nearly nude gunman killed four people at a Waffle House restaurant in Nashville, Tennessee, early on Sunday and then fled after a patron saved lives by wrestling the assault-style rifle from his hands.

The suspected shooter, identified by authorities as Travis Reinking, 29, fled on foot and was still at large as murder warrants were being issued for him, the Metropolitan Nashville Police said.

Reinking, originally from Morton, Illinois, lives near the restaurant, Nashville police spokesman Don Aaron told an afternoon news conference. The gunman's vehicle was registered to him and it was found at the scene, Aaron said.

Police speculate that Reinking ran home, grabbed a pair of pants and fled his apartment. A shirtless, shoeless man believed to be him was spotted in the woods nearby, police said.

The gunman, who was naked but for a green jacket, first shot and killed two people in the parking lot of the restaurant in Antioch, a section of southeast Nashville, shortly before 3:30 a.m. He then entered the restaurant and opened fire, police said, killing one patron and wounding another, who later died.

One diner, James Shaw Jr., 29, who had hidden near the restrooms, dashed out and pulled the rifle from the gunman. His fast actions were credited with saving lives, but Shaw said at the news conference that he was no hero.

"I just wanted to live," said Shaw, who added that he had been getting a snack with friends after a fraternity house party. Shaw suffered non-life-threatening wounds including an injured elbow, while other patrons suffered facial wounds from shattered glass.

As the shooter ran off, he discarded the jacket, which contained ammunition, according to police, who cautioned that he was to be considered still armed and dangerous.

While the AR-15 rifle wrestled from the gunman and another weapon in his apartment were recovered, police said the suspect may have two more guns with him. Authorities said all four weapons — including a hunting rifle and handgun — were seized from Reinking last July after he was arrested by the Secret Service for being in a restricted area near the White House.

TRUMP'S TRAVEL BAN FACES SUPREME COURT

4 The first big showdown at the Supreme Court over President Donald Trump's immigration policies is set for Wednesday when the justices hear a challenge to the lawfulness of his travel ban targeting people from several Muslim-majority countries. The case represents a test of the limits of presidential power. Trump's policy, announced in September, blocks entry into the United States of most people from Iran, Libya, Somalia, Syria and Yemen. Chad previously was on the list but Trump lifted those restrictions on April 10. The high court has never decided the legal merits of the travel ban or any other major Trump immigration policy, including his move to rescind protections for young immigrants sometimes called Dreamers brought into the United States illegally as children. It has previously acted on Trump requests to undo lower court orders blocking those two policies, siding with him on the travel ban and opposing him on the Dreamers. Trump's immigration policies — also including actions taken against states and cities that protect illegal immigrants, intensified deportation efforts and limits on legal immigration — have been among his most contentious.

BLOOMBERG TO PAY $4.5 MILLION FOR CLIMATE PACT

5 Former New York mayor and billionaire Michael Bloomberg said on Sunday he will write a $4.5 million check to cover this year's U.S. financial commitment to the Paris Climate Agreement. President Donald Trump last year pulled the United States out of the pact, making the country the only one opposed to it. Bloomberg, in a CBS interview, said he hopes by next year Trump will have changed his mind. Bloomberg will continue to provide money for the pact if the United States does not rejoin the agreement, according to a news release from Bloomberg Philanthropies, the charity he founded."Our foundation will uphold our promise to cover any cuts to UN climate funding by the federal government," Bloomberg said in the statement. Trump staunchly opposes the agreement and his administration has rolled back a number of environmental regulations.

Boston may be top Amazon HQ2 contender, but do residents want it here?

Thirty-four percent of residents "strongly support" Amazon coming to town — the lowest of all 16 finalists.

WHAT WOULD AMAZON BRING TO ITS NEW HQ2 CITY?

50,000 "high-paying" jobs
$5 billion investment
8.1 million square-foot campus
$43 million paid into city's public transportation system as employees' transportation benefit
$38 billion in additional investments into the local economy

Boston is in the running to become the home of Amazon's new second headquarters. GETTY IMAGES

Boston may be a top choice for HQ2, but do residents really want Boston to be the tech giant's new second home?

Boston and the Washington, D.C., metro area are the "most likely candidates" for the second headquarters, according to a new report by The Conference Board, a business research nonprofit.

The Conference Board looked at online job openings posted by Amazon between Dec. 2016 and Dec. 2017. These positions, according to Help Wanted OnLine data, fall under the same categories of jobs at their current headquarters, more than likely roles Amazon would have to fill at their new headquarters, as well.

Not all Amazon shortlist cities saw these job ads, though. Boston and Washington saw both a large number of job ads in those areas, as well as a large increase in the amount of job ads compared to before that time period — suggesting, the report says, that they are the top contenders.

But a recent poll by Elon University found that there's not a lot of strong support for HQ2 among Bostonians. Only 34 percent of residents here say they "strongly support" Amazon moving in — the lowest rate out of all 16 metro areas finalists.

That surprised James Stockard, a Harvard University urban planning lecturer and an expert on affordable housing and community development.

"The idea of a big national corporation coming to a particular location and bringing a whole lot of new jobs, generally people would see that as an attractive thing for their community," he said.

Stockard isn't in "strong support" of HQ2 here, either. He worries about how the addition of HQ2 would affect the local housing market, traffic, schools, taxes and so on.

A lot of people are in the middle, with 38 percent saying they "somewhat support" and 22 percent saying they "neither support nor oppose" it.

"Boston has a generally pretty intelligent population, people think past the headlines often, and I give our community and residents a lot of credit for that. My guess is their thoughtfulness is leading to some questions," he said.

What needs to be done to address these questions? Officials from Amazon and the city and state need to go beyond the big headlines — the fact of a big company bringing 50,000 jobs — and talk about the implications of HQ2 directly with the public, Stockard said.

"[It's about] what can Amazon do as a corporate partner, if you will, with our region so that everybody wins, not just two or three of the actors?" he said.

BEST LOBSTER ROLLS

The best lobster roll in Boston that you can get delivered
People are funny. They say they want one thing and do another, kind of like how if people see a salad offered as a side option on a menu, they're more likely to order fries because they feel sort of virtuous for even considering the salad. That's how we know that even your friend who claims the best lobster roll in Boston could never be delivered orders them to their door online.

And that's a great thing. After all, what good is the best lobster roll in Boston if you can't eat it when you're really craving it, even if that time happens to overlap with when you're an hour deep into a serious streaming session of your favorite TV show?

That's why Metro teamed up with Grubhub to find the best lobster roll in Boston that you can get delivered through their food delivery platform. And we're not messing around. They combed through their data, ratings and reviews to find out who lived up to the title. You see, it's not good enough to just have a good lobster roll. No, these restaurants had to also show that their rolls are road tested: They need to travel and get to your door still perfectly delicious.

The best lobster roll in Boston on Grubhub
The winner was the Maine Lobster Roll from Joe's American Bar and Grill at 181 Newbury St.

They've got the butter, they've nailed the bread — we'll cut to the chase — they have a handle on every component you expect from the best lobster roll in Boston. Plus, they earned top marks for speed of delivery.

Other than the luscious lemon-chive mayo, diners praised the food for being "tasty and simple." Bonus points for having "amazing bread" that customers raved about. LINNEA ZIELINSKI

Information on train arrival times will get more accurate throughout the MBTA, the transit authority said. GETTY IMAGES

Real-time train predictions will be more accurate, MBTA says

Thanks to upgrades to the technology that relays arrival-time predictions, customers can better plan their subway trips, the MBTA announced.

KRISTIN TOUSSAINT
kristin.toussaint@metro.us

The MBTA said it has improved its subway arrival prediction times, so you can plan your trips with MBTA.com and some smartphone apps with more confidence.

This improvement to the MBTA's real-time information follows an announcement in March the transit authority made concerning its prediction times and train locations for the Commuter Rail.

"... we're happy to extend improved train prediction times ..."
MBTA General Manager Luis Manuel Ramírez

Now, the MBTA announced on Friday, their improved real-time info, called "Rapid Transit Realtime," has launched for the Red, Orange and Blue lines. (The Green Line and Mattapan Trolley had launched data-quality upgrades previously, the MBTA said, in Feb. 2018 and June 2017, respectively.)

Commuters can see in real-time when their trains are running at MBTA.com and with smartphone apps like Transit. These resources will list more accurate arrival predictions, as well as update those predictions more frequently.

"While our strategy to make capital investments in core infrastructure continues, we must remember that technology is a major part of our infrastructure that needs to be upgraded as well," said MBTA General Manager Luis Manuel Ramírez in a statement. "As we strive to improve our customers' experience, we're happy to extend improved train prediction times on the Orange, Red, and Blue lines."

Information on train arrival times will now be refreshed every six seconds. Previously, time info was between 15 and 45 seconds old, the MBTA said.

Rapid Transit Realtime will also be upgrading in the coming months to provide more features for riders, like details about how long a train is expected to wait before leaving the terminal. This will make predictions during delays more accurate, officials said, as well as help keep customers informed when shuttle buses are in service for part of or all of a subway line.

New Non-Pill Sex Cream for Men Gets Amazing Results

Recent warnings on sex drugs leads to the creation of an amazing no pill option; key ingredients activate sensation pathways triggering erections and arousal

Christopher Steel
San Diego, CA

The medical community now has a safer and more effective alternative to sex pills, which they can immediately start offering to male patients with sexual performance issues. It will not require a prescription.

The alternative, called Sensum+®, is an amazing new sex cream containing an active ingredient that activates a sensation pathway on the penis known as TRPA1.

When applied as directed, it leads to incredible arousal and triggers erections more easily.

It also promotes powerful climaxes and ultimately results in significant improvements in performance.

"Men can expect to experience life changing sexual improvements with regular use. The penis will become hyper sensitive, making them easily aroused and excitable," explains Dr. Henry Esber, the President of the company behind Sensum+®.

"And that's because Sensum+® does what no other sex pill or drug has done before – it stimulates a special sensory pathway right below the skin, which leads to phenomenal improvements in sensation."

Overtime, constant exposure (especially if circumcised) leads to decreased penis sensitivity, which can cause problems with arousal and erection quality. There just isn't enough feeling to get excited."

"Diabetes, anti-depressants and normal aging also leads to desensitization, and can make the situation even worse."

"This is what makes Sensum+® so effective and why the clinical studies and clinical use studies have been so positive."

MISDIAGNOSES LEADS TO UNNEEDED PRESCRIPTIONS

After years of clinical research and testing, researchers discovered an incredible compound that triggers arousal and helps men achieve erections more easily.

This compound isn't a drug. It's the active ingredient in Sensum+®.

And according to users, it produces sensational results. Many men report remarkable improvements in sexual performance and overall satisfaction.

They are more sexually active than they've been in years with the average Sensum+® user over the age of 50.

According to research, many men adults and seniors who suffer sexually have lost sensation in their penis due to constant rubbing and exposure and health related issues such as diabetes, hernia surgery, use of some anti-depressants, multiple sclerosis, and other type of illnesses.

This desensitization often makes sex extremely challenging. Without a 100% feeling in the penis, its next to impossible to get truly aroused.

Worse, modern day sex drugs have absolutely no effect on sensation and are laden with side effects. They simply stimulate an erection by enhancing blood flow.

It's why most men are rarely satisfied after taking them and why Sensum+® users are always stocking up on more and couldn't be happier.

"We knew the science behind Sensum+® was there, but we never expected results like we're seeing. It's far exceeded our expectations" said a spokesperson for the company.

A STAGGERING 80% IMPROVEMENT IN SENSITIVITY

Researchers have conducted several clinical studies on Sensum+® and the results from the most recent are undoubtedly the most impressive.

A data analysis of three clinical surveys of 370 men showed that an amazing 80% of Sensum+® users experienced dramatic improvements while using the cream and as a result were aroused easier and a phenomenal boost in performance.

Additionally, 77.4% of men also reported much more satisfying climaxes, making sex for both them and their partners nearly 300% more satisfying.

"I have full feeling and sensitivity back in my penis. Everything feels better. My erections are harder, I'm more easily aroused, I can finally climax again. This stuff honestly works like magic in the bedroom. I couldn't be happier at 66!" raves one Sensum+® user.

HOW SENSUM+® WORKS

Sensum+® is a new sex cream for men that's to be applied twice a day for the first two weeks then just once every day after.

There are no harmful side effects for either the user or partner. It also does not require a prescription.

The active ingredient is an organic compound known as cinnamaldehyde with a patented combination of sexually rousing extracts.

Research shows that as men get older, they often lose sensitivity to the penis.

Although very subtle, this desensitization can significantly hinder sexual performance and lead to serious problems with becoming aroused and staying/getting hard.

The cinnamaldehyde in Sensum+® is one of the only known ingredients to activate a special sensation pathway on the penis called TRPA1. Once activated, it restores tremendous sensation to the penis, stimulating arousal and powerful erections.

This would explain why so many users are experiencing impressive results so quickly and why the company behind Sensum+® offers their low cost cream with an amazing guarantee.

The End of Sex Pills: Sensum is a new clinically tested sex cream that enhances arousal and sensitivity, leading to improved erections and performance. No prescription required.

GUARANTEE DISCOUNTED SUPPLY TAKES RISK OFF CONSUMERS

A large percentage of men report life changing results with Sensum+®. That's why it is now being sold with an above-industry standard guarantee.

"We can only make this guarantee because we are 100% certain this cream works," says Damaj.

"We want to take risk off the consumers. So besides offering massive discounts, we're also offering this guarantee, so they don't have to risk a cent."

Here's how it works: Use the cream exactly as directed and in just one week, you must feel a significant improvement in sexual sensations. You must be more easily aroused with harder, longer lasting erections and be having the best sex you've had in years.

Otherwise, simply return the empty bottles. Then, Innovus Pharmaceuticals will refund your money immediately.

Your slow cooker still works in spring

These "impress your friends" recipes are easy enough to throw together before work and enjoy when you come home. LUCY E. COUSINS

There are few things better than walking into your home and smelling a delicious meal you prepared earlier. All you need to do is get chopping in the morning, set your timer and then come home to a perfectly cooked meal. What more could you want?

We asked nutritionist Zoe Bingley Pullin for her top three healthy slow-cooker recipes, but with a twist to take the genre from the traditional winter warmer to spring. Sure, you can make regular chili in a slow cooker, but with a few unusual ingredients you can create dinners that will impress even the toughest critics as the temperatures start to rise.

Brown rice and seaweed congee

Congee
1 cup brown rice, uncooked
8 cups vegetable stock or miso paste
1 tbsp ginger, grated
¼ cup wakame (edible seaweed), soaked in ¼ cup water
½ cup dulse flakes (sea lettuce flakes), soaked in ¼ cup water

Toppings
Sesame roasted nori
Boiled eggs
Alfalfa sprouts

Method
1. Rinse the rice under cold water and drain well (preferably overnight).
2. Combine stock, rice and ginger in your slow cooker and cook on high for 5 hours. The rice is ready when it looks like a thick soup — extra liquid may be required during the cooking process.
3. Fold in the wakame and dulse. Spoon rice into individual bowls and top with crumbled sesame, roasted nori, boiled eggs and alfalfa sprouts.

Tip: For extra crunch, top with chopped roasted tamari almonds. If wakame is not available in supermarkets, try a health food store.

Tip: Fresh pandan leaves are available from Asian grocery stores and have a sweet vanilla-like flavor.

2. In a food processor add all of the stuffing ingredients — except the limes — and blend to a rough consistency.
3. Using latex gloves, stuff the chicken. Then place the chicken breast-side up on a rack in a slow cooker and cook on high for 4 hours (or low for 7 hours). To test if cooked, stick a skewer into the chicken and the juice should run clear.

Let's talk about the insane finale of 'Jane the Virgin'

The finale puts Jane through the requisite ups and downs — then doubles down. ALL PHOTOS CW

Jane and Rafael almost get engaged, but there's one roadblock they can't exactly ignore.

Michael is alive. I repeat: Michael. Is. Alive!

RACHAEL VAUGHAN CLEMMONS
rachael.clemmons@metro.us

The "Jane the Virgin" finale had plenty of twists and turns — standard fare for the CW series. After all, it is — as the narrator consistently and kindly reminds us — a telenovela.

Petra reveals she did kill her sister, but only to protect her daughters! JR shoots someone before they can kill Petra! Alba marries ol' dude Jorge after her surprise party! River Shields finally comes around to Rogelio and manages to finally spell Alba's name right!

But one twist tops them all. One twist has this writer thinking, maybe "Jane the Virgin" has out-twisted itself. Because somehow, some way, the last 10 seconds of the finale reveal that Michael is back from the dead.

If you too are asking — wait, what? How? Why? Join the club. As always, though, "Jane" dropped clues throughout the episode, which aimed to celebrate what Jane calls the lightness and the dark, together. The biggest hint to this frankly insane surprise is when Jane, in all of her meta glory, says of her novel outline, "[The plot twist] isn't landing because it wasn't set up properly." The finale then does the work of investing us, once again, in Jane and Rafael's relationship, particularly how far they've come since the death of Michael. So when a bountifully bearded Michael appears in Raf's bedroom, looking very much alive, it's worth a double, triple — nay — quadruple take.

Based on those last seconds, all bets are off for next season — which is slated to be "Jane's" last. It also brings up a lot of questions: Is that really Michael or some sort of long lost evil twin? If it is Michael, did he fake his death? And most importantly, will we be forced to spend the series' last episodes trudging through a love triangle between Jane, Michael and Rafael again? Because that would be torture.

Either way, one thing is clear: the stakes are higher than ever for the final season of "Jane the Virgin." For its last hurrah, here's hoping the series continues to outdo itself.

Lakers fan Ice Cube is pumped to bring BIG3 to Boston

The rapper and actor has nothing but respect for Celtics fans.

MATT JUUL
matthew.juul@metro.us

The Lakers-Celtics rivalry may be one of the biggest in sports, but that's not stopping Ice Cube from showing Boston some love.

The rapper, actor and noted Los Angeles fan is bringing his BIG3 basketball league to the Hub this summer, and he couldn't be more excited. Cube told Metro during a recent conference call with press that he has nothing but respect for Celtics fans and can't wait for the trip to Boston this season.

"Boston is a great basketball town," Cube said. "I grew up a Lakers fan, but I always respected Boston fans with the passion they have for their team."

Co-founded by Ice Cube and Jeff Kwatinetz, the 3-on-3 basketball league has become a hit since it debuted last year and features some of the best ballers and ex-NBA players around. This year's roster includes all-stars like Kenyon Martin, Ron Artest, Nate Robinson, Amar'e Stoudemire, Baron Davis, Chris "Birdman" Andersen, Quentin Richardson and Jermaine O'Neal.

Ice Cube and former Celtics star Rajon Rondo.

Fans can also expect several ex-Celtics to throw down this season, such as Brian Scalabrine, Ricky Davis, Chauncey Billups and Glen "Big Baby" Davis. Allen Iverson, Julius Erving and slew of other legends have been tapped to serve as coaches.

After a successful first season in 2017, BIG3 is coming to a number of new cities this year, including Boston. Ice Cube admits he's pretty pumped for his first trip to the TD Garden on Aug. 3.

"I'm excited to come to TD Garden," Cube said. "It's going to be my first time in the arena, so I'm excited to see that history and bring a little history with me.

"This was a place that we've had our eye on," he added. "Boston is definitely a basketball town."

Tickets to the 2018 season of BIG3 are on sale now.

When is the perfect time to ask for a raise?

The simple strategy that'll ensure you're taken seriously.

LUCY E. COUSINS
letters@metro.us

If you're a little nervous about asking for a raise, join the club. Negotiating with your boss about money is a hard thing to do, especially if you're not sure that the answer will be yes.

So how do you know when it's best time to ask for a pay increase? To help you avoid disappointment, follow this simple guide for preparing for the conversation by asking yourself these five questions:

Am I performing as well as I can in this role?
There's no use in asking for a raise if you're not outstanding in your role. Are you the first in, last out? Do you put your hand up to help out on new projects? Are you on top of your email and correspondence? It's important to know how well you're doing and what your strengths (and potential weaknesses) are before your meeting.

Can I present clear examples of why I deserve this raise?
If you're blitzing your role, chances are that your boss has noticed, but if not, being able to produce facts, figures and examples of your influence and effectiveness in your role is essential. If your boss asks you why you deserve the raise, you need to answer clearly and concisely.

Has my role changed recently?
If your company just hired a large intake of staff and your job has eased up a bit, it might not be the best time to ask for a raise. However, if you've just taken on a higher responsibility load, and you've handled it well, then lock and load! The odds could be in your favor.

Have I worked longer than a year in my current role?
It's a simple rookie mistake to ask for a raise within your first year with the company. That is, unless you negotiated a six-month raise when you were hired. If so, it might be worth negotiating the date of your next salary evaluation, too.

Do you understand the company budget cycle?
Being aware of when budgets are approved is key to understanding if you're actually able to receive a raise. If the salary budgets were approved last week, for example, there's no point in even asking your boss for a raise until about 12 weeks before they're set again for next year.

What do I want from my raise?
Just asking for a "raise" simply isn't good enough. If your boss is considering it, you need to be able to quantify your request. Do you want a specific percentage increase, or perhaps you're asking for benefits? Maybe what you're actually interested in is a title change along with your raise. Being prepared to negotiate is a key skill to learn for these situations.

How to nail the first week in a new job

Here's what you need to know to not mess up your first five days.

LUCY E. COUSINS
letters@metro.us

Your first week in a new job is a little like a first date. You dress up, you have to make small talk and you try your hardest to make a good impression. And as any boss will tell you, there is only one impression that counts. The first one.

So with that in mind, we spoke to Andrea Clarke from Career CEO to create this guide for how to make it through your first week with flying colors.

Don't put on an act

The best approach is to be your normal, everyday self. Don't try to be somebody you aren't because by week two, keeping up the pretense will become very tedious indeed. In saying that, perhaps keep the inner workings of your mind to yourself until you know your colleagues a little better – they don't need to know about your belly button lint collection just yet.

Know the company

Internal politics are all well and good, but do you know what the share price is today? It's always a good idea to create a Google news alert for your new company and maybe the top execs/ key players, your competitors and industry regulators. It pays to stay current on all the issues that impact your organization, so you don't put your foot in it in your first meeting.

Research your workmates

But in a non-stalkery way. Instead of the usual chitchat, why not do some due diligence on your new colleagues so you can find common ground early? Maybe connect with them on LinkedIn (if appropriate) and ask them about the last project they worked on or award they were nominated for. Prove that you're paying attention and you're interested.

The transition from classroom to boardroom must be on your mind.
IMAGES FROM ISTOCK

Understand your boss

You wouldn't play the U.S. Open without knowing the rules; same goes for dealing with a new boss. To start with, ask your colleagues about your boss' rules of engagement. For example, does she prefer face-to-face questions, emails or phone calls? What hours are out of bounds? What does she expect from you? The bottom line is that you need to clearly understand the expectations before you start the game.

Speak up

Perhaps you started in a new industry or you've stepped up to a new position. Either way, it's important to understand that you're getting paid to be effective and to have an opinion. So try to speak with authority in meetings and carry yourself confidently. Using a warm and sincere tone can help smooth any mistakes over.

Don't overcommit

It's easy to give yourself analysis-paralysis by taking on too much too soon. However, the truth is that while you're still getting your bearings (let's face it, getting a desk and functioning computer can be a 25-step process in some workplaces), you should dial back the anxiety and go get yourself a coffee.

Don't overthink it

If in doubt, do nothing. It can take an entire year in a new job to feel as though you have a real "handle" on it, so give things time to settle in and don't rush any decisions. If you have doubts about the role, discuss them externally with a friend or mentor, not with your new colleagues in the kitchen.

Call it early

You never really know what a business is like until you punch in, and if you think that this new job is not for you, then be candid about it. Your boss should appreciate some straight- up honesty, and you can use it as an opportunity to make a savvier move. Just be sure to manage your exit in a respectful and measured way – i.e., don't trash your desk and poison the office plant on your way out.

BROWN AND TATUM TRULY CHAMPIONSHIP MATERIAL

OPINION

MATT BURKE

Matt Burke is the Executive Sports Editor and a columnist at Metro US. Follow him on Twitter @burke_metro

Any playoff loss will not be remembered fondly by the Celtics faithful, but Sunday's 104-102 loss to the Milwaukee Bucks should be.

Sunday was the day that both Jaylen Brown and Jayson Tatum confirmed their respective status' as longterm pieces to the Celtics' championship puzzle. Now — just as much as Kyrie Irving and Gordon Hayward — the "Jay-Team" holds the keys to the next great Boston basketball team.

The 21-year-old Brown and the 20-year-old Tatum both looked like NBA playoff-seasoned vets in Southern Wisconsin on Sunday as they not only rescued the C's from being blown out but also sparked one of the top comebacks in recent playoff history. Down by 20 points midway through the third, the C's went on a 12-2 run. A twisting Brown layup in traffic and a Tatum 3-pointer then cut the Bucks lead to nine, 69-60 with 3:13 left in the third.

Brown's fourth 3-pointer of the day — which came a good three feet behind the 3-point stripe early in the fourth quarter — cut the Bucks lead down to just three, 75-72. A 28-footer by Brown with 1:29 remaining sliced the Milwaukee lead to only one, and then on the very next Celtics possession Tatum's 17-foot isolation jumper over Khris Middleton at the top of the key with 52.4 seconds left punched the Celtics through the wall. The C's finally had a lead, 100-99.

In the final two quarters the Celtics, led by Brown and Tatum, had shown a championship-level amount of basketball toughness in the playoffs, and on the road.

"I've been around a lot of teams and have been fortunate to be around a lot of really tough teams," Celtics head coach Brad Stevens said of this 2017-18 group a few weeks back to ESPN. "I'm not sure I've been around one that, in the face of a tough stretch on a basketball court, responds better than this one."

Jaylen Brown and Jayson Tatum have played like seasoned veterans so far this postseason. GETTY IMAGES

Jaylen Brown averaged 5.0 points per game last postseason. This year he's averaging 23.8 points, a jump of 18.8.

In the final 52.4 seconds of Sunday's game, however, the Celtics did show that they probably don't have the horses to win big in the 2017-18 playoffs. Tatum's iso jumper was the last Celtics field goal of the game, and Milwaukee was the one to make that last big bucket with Giannis Antetokounmpo tipping in a Malcolm Brogdon miss with 5.1 seconds left.

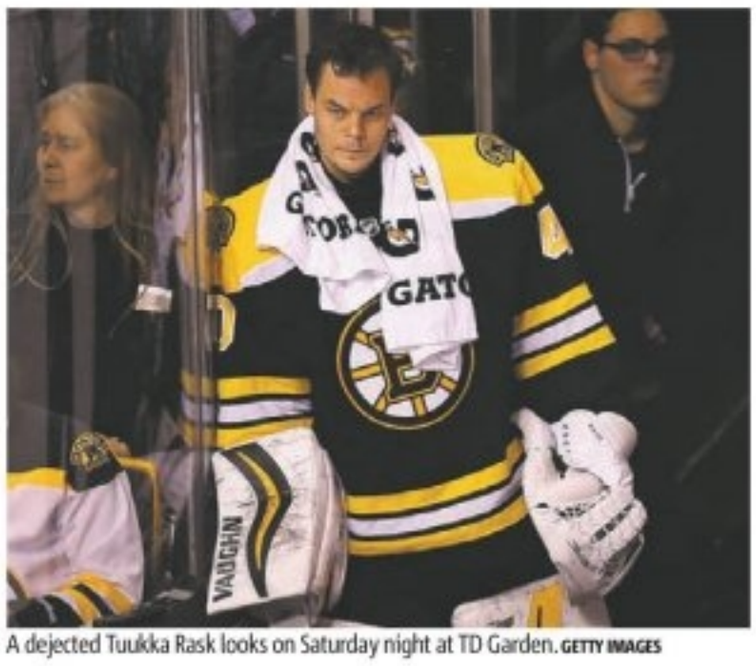
Brown finished with 34 points, having made 5-of-8 from 3-point range and Tatum finished with 21 on 7-of-16 shooting from the floor.

The Celtics do not raise Atlantic Division championship banners from the rafters, nor will they start hanging Indianapolis Colts-style moral victory pennants anytime soon either. But make no mistake, Sunday's loss to the Bucks was special. It was the day Brown and Tatum became bona fide NBA playoff weapons.

Bruins will be seeking quick start in Game 6 tonight

The Bruins had a chance to end Toronto's 2017-18 season on Saturday night in Game 5 at TD Garden but they just couldn't seal the deal as the Maple Leafs survived 4-3 to trim Boston's series lead to 3-2. They'll meet again at Air Canada Centre on Monday (7, NESN) for Game 6.

There is no doubt that this was a missed opportunity for the B's, but the nature of the NHL playoffs is that you have to bounce back right away and not let things linger from game-to-game if you want to continue to advance.



A dejected Tuukka Rask looks on Saturday night at TD Garden. GETTY IMAGES

No single player was more emblematic of the up-and-down nature of it all than Bruins goaltender Tuukka Rask, who was rightfully hailed as the hero of Game 4's improbable 3-1 victory and then was the goat two nights later. Rask was pulled in the second period, having allowed four goals on only 13 shots.

Bruins head coach Bruce Cassidy always stresses that his team starts on time (meaning that they are ready to go from the opening face-off), except the B's did anything but that in Game 5 as they trailed, 2-0, just 10:12 into the contest.

"The stuff that we've done lately: defend and get saves, that didn't happen early on," Cassidy said. "We found our legs eventually and fought our way back in, but the start wasn't good enough."

It's one of the most basic stats in hockey, but often one of the easiest predictors of future success: whichever team scores the first goal of the game typically earns victory. In games 1 through 5 of this series, that has been the case. That's no guarantee that whomever notches the first goal on Monday is destined to win but it would certainly seem to help matters.

The B's have no reason to panic since that 3-1 series lead afforded them — essentially — a Game 5 to burn. Game 6 represents their final breathing room as Game 7s in the NHL playoffs are always a complete crapshoots no matter if you're on home ice or not.

"We still have a lot of confidence," Bruins forward Tim Schaller, who had an assist in Game 5, said. "We had a good pushback, so we're going to take that and hopefully have a good first five minutes in Toronto and go from there."

Tampa Bay disposed of New Jersey in a tidy five games with their series ending on Saturday afternoon, giving Boston yet another reason to put this Toronto series in the rearview mirror as the winner of Bruins-Leafs will get the Lightning in the second round of the postseason.

Aries Don't let the actions of others slow you down. Use your wit and intelligence to help others and you will gain support and ward off those who would like to sabotage you.

Taurus Don't let a sensitive issue slow you down. Stay focused on what's expected of you and do your best to avoid excessive situations or someone who is overreacting.

Gemini Group endeavors are favored. Host an event that will bring you closer to the people you love or those you have a common interest with. Share your vision.

Cancer Don't take what others do or say personally. Look for your own way to make a difference, and partner with people who are in sync with your way of thinking.

Leo Ask questions and make changes based on facts and what you know is possible. Disregard anyone offering a pie-in-the-sky plan that could end up costing you.

Virgo If you contribute to a conversation with intelligence, facts and confidence, you will make a good impression. Moderation will be noted, so avoid indulgent behavior.

Libra You'll receive more help from outsiders than you will from those close to you. Take a break from family and spend time with someone who shares your interests.

Scorpio An emotional incident is best dismissed without a fuss. You'll tend to overreact or make a mistake if you act before you have time to think matters through.

Sagittarius Question your motives and consider how your plans will affect others. Don't present your ideas until you are fully prepared to defend your decision.

Capricorn Dealing with friends or relatives will be difficult, and trying to please everyone will be impossible. Do your best, but don't make unrealistic promises.

Aquarius Don't let your emotions get you into trouble. Getting involved with something for the wrong reason will distress a friend or loved one.

Pisces Don't fritter away precious time. Get down to business and finish what's expected of you. Taking your responsibilities seriously will help you avoid criticism. EUGENIA LAST
